SUPER FOOD

Sweet potatoes are enriched with fibre and promote a healthy digestion. As the vegetable contains a high amount of antioxidants, it prevents inflammation and supports a balanced blood sugar level.

Peas are considered as one of the most essential vegetable protein sources. Their high amount of protein strenghtens muscles, skin and bones.

Linseeds have a digestive effect and enable a positive impact on the intestinal activity. Additionally, they prevent constipation as well as the fight intestinal inflammation with the aid of polyunsaturated fatty acids.

Rose Hips have a high vitamin C content. Further, they boost the immune system with lycopene which is processed into vitamin A in the body and thus protects cells from free radicals and aging processes.

Chicory supports the digestion and detoxification of the body with the aid of its bitter substance intybin. Chicory also contains prebiotic inulin which strengthens the intestinal flora and the immune system.

New Zealand Green-Lipped Mussel serves as a natural source of chondroitin and glucosamine. It promotes healthy joints, cartilage formation and improves the mobility. It also contains a unique blend of essential fatty acids.

Currants are real vitamin bombs as they are rich in vitamin C and folic acid, which is one of the B-vitamins. It plays an important role in cell division and growth whereas vitamin C strengthens the immune system. Currants also incorporate valuable anthocyanins whose special substance protects the cells from oxidative stress.

Yucca Schidigera reduces the formation of ammonia in the faeces and urine through its bitter saponins which causes fewer unpleasent odors. Since the saponins bind deposits and toxins in the intestine, it has a beneficial effect on intestinal health. In addition, toxins are bound in the joints.

Blueberries are also considered as small vitamin bombs. They contain plenty of vitamin C and E. Special tannins in blueberries counteract diarrhoea, inhibit the growth of bacteria and accelerate the healing of inflammation of the mucous membranes.

Milk Thistle Seeds protect and support the liver, thanks to the natural content of silymarin. The liver is an important detoxification organ.

Elderberries are full of vitamin C and important trace elements which support the immune system. They also have a detoxifying effect.

SUPER FOOD for Dogs

OMEGA 3 + 6

There is a good reason why our meals contain the essential fatty acids Omega-3 and Omega-6. They don't just serve as flavour carriers but also provide energy and support your pets' health: A shiny coat, healthy skin and the support of the nervous system. Additionally, it promotes the heart function and eye sight. To be more precise, the acids DHA and EPA cause these benefits and thus are essential for your pet's organism. However, they cannot be produced by the dog itself so that they need to be delivered through our SUPER FOOD.
